SOFT SEATING
& ACOUSTICS

The rethinking of the traditional workplace is on fast forward. Breakout spaces which offer flow from one place to another, and from one workstyle to another, have never been more relevant. In the world we are now living in, the workplace must provide spaces for work and non-work activities, which encourage employees to come to work to engage, collaborate and thrive. Spaces with a flexible approach that adapts to all needs of the workday.

Fortunately, that is what we do. Multipurpose furniture solutions.

Breakout spaces used to be seen as secondary and alternative settings in the workplace, but we believe today's break-out spaces are just as important as desk sitting spaces. Focusing on breakout spaces as social spaces and as a vital tool in supporting the natural flexing of staff members coming in and out of the office, is key. Breakout areas should be made primary if you ask us: We call them In-between Spaces.

Rethinking In-Between Spaces

We all know the design and layout of a space, and the surroundings we work in can affect the way we feel. The science of environmental psychology focuses on this very subject, such is its importance.

Rooms facilitate all types of activity, they are not just spaces or the outward face of the organisation. We see rooms as multi-functional spaces where work colleagues collaborate, socialise, learn, and share knowledge. Research suggests that employees only spend on average 30-55% of their time at work by themselves at their desk daily. The rest of the time is spent either out of the house, in meetings, or working together away from the desk with an increased amount of time also spent working from home. Now more than ever, private spaces and traditional desk settings within the office are undergoing significant change.

Whereas breakout and in-between spaces have been regarded as alternative settings as opposed to primary locations (the desk), we argue these spaces are increasingly becoming an essential luxury forming part of a hybrid style of working. In-between spaces have moved up the priority list when designing and planning workspaces.

- 1. to be pleased about and encourage or support something
- 2. to meet and speak to someone in a friendly way when they arrive

We all know first impressions count. Those make or break first impressions in organisations are important. Let the entrance space permeate your brand identity. Do so with warm and inviting soft seating which underpins the very core of your brand. Whether the message is innovation, community, or creativity make sure the area says: Welcome!

LOUNGE

LOUNGE /laʊndʒ/ noun

- 2. a room in a hotel, airport, theatre, etc. where people can relax or wait

/laʊndʒ/ verb

- 1. to stand or sit in a relaxed way

In a world where we are constantly referring to experiences, the in-between space is most likely to deliver a valuable experience. Relaxing alternatives to desk seating in the office and social spaces are effective in breaking down silos within organisations. They encourage community and collaboration. And that is what we want.

Ideal for the built environment and scooting around in the open space. Comfortable as seating too, even in the meeting room.

PAUSE

PAUSE /pə:z/ noun

a short period in which something such as a sound or an activity is stopped before starting again

Offer a pause in movement. Before the next meeting or before welcoming your next client. Soft furniture connected by the scent of really nice coffee, books or a chance encounter with a colleague create those markers in routine which are vital for a thriving culture. A pause in movement allows a given space to become a center of felt value. Front and back of house.

A Periphery Pause

When about to reach your limit: Enter: books, a report or a white paper. Reading works as a stress reducer and paired with a nice cup of coffee, a few minutes is all it takes for your brain to recharge.

A Unique Design Philosophy

Function. Design. Aha. Inextricably intertwined with one another, you hear us talk about it a lot. Basically, FDA is our way of spelling out exactly what we think design should be all about.

We talk about FDA perpetually because we are very adamant about it. It is the backbone of our approach to the way we do things and serves as a succinct summary of our vision, product strategy, and goals. It's our design philosophy. That something special. The added value.

But it is so much more than that. It is a way of life. It is not rocket science. Let's break it down.

Function

Does it save m<sup>2</sup> in the most intelligent way possible? Is it task aware? Does it provide visual or acoustic privacy? Does it have comfort? Does it have modularity?

Design

Does it have visual appeal? Is it easy on the eye? Does it tickle our senses? Is it compatible with our other furniture concepts? Are we taking care of our planet?

Aha

Is there an element of surprise? Does it prompt inner smiles? Does it have a unique intangible quality? Does it have value for money?

These are just some of the questions that we ask ourselves when developing those really fresh ideas. If we can't answer an obvious yes... we push ourselves further.

Because we are driven by happy people, inspiring environments and a deeper sense of purpose.
